Forecast For Scotland
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 0400 on Wednesday 08 Sep 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Very warm or hot.

Today:
A fine dry day with long spells of sunshine. Potentially the hottest September day in Scotland for over 100 years, maximum temperatures around 28C. However, cloudier across the Northern and Western Isles with occasional rain and mist.

Tonight:
Mainly dry with clear spells, some mist and fog patches overnight, particularly around the coast. However, showers are possible around the west coast and across the Northern and Western Isles.

Thursday:
Bright spells and occasional showers. The showers initially in the far north and west, but becoming more widespread during the day, possibly heavy and thundery.

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Showers or longer outbreaks of rain on Friday, perhaps heavy and thundery. Rain in the north on Saturday, drier and brighter in the south. Mainly dry and bright Sunday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.